E-Beam and Optical Proximity Effect Reduction for Nanolithography: New Results

M. Peckerar, University of Maryland

In this paper we show how linear programing approaches (LP) can be used in optical proximity control using checkerboard patterns at feature boundaries. We further describe an algorithm useful for nanostructure development that can be implemented on desktop computers.